Dear Sir/Madam,

APPLICATION FOR A PUPILAGE SLOT AT FITCH ATTORNEYS

I am Tracy Lawson, a Part Two student at the Ghana School of Law, awaiting my call to the Bar in October 2026. I am writing to apply for a pupillage position in your firm and to make the case for why I believe I would thrive in this environment.

I am at a stage in my legal journey where the quality of the environment in which I train is of great significance. I have given deliberate thought to the kind of practice I want to build. My primary interests lie in investment law, corporate law, and alternative dispute resolution, complemented by a strong interest in medical law, an area I am currently exploring through independent research.

My legal experience to date has been deliberately varied and increasingly substantive. I have interned at Axis Legal and, more recently, completed two stints at Kulendi @Law, where I took on progressively greater responsibility spanning from foundational legal research to independently drafting memoranda, analysing case files, and contributing to client advisory sessions. Most significantly, I served as a legal intern at Commercial Court 6 of the High Court, Accra, under the supervision of Her Ladyship Justice Sedina Agbemava, where I co-authored legal opinions that directly informed rulings in live commercial proceedings. That experience gave me a rare and early appreciation of the rigour demanded at the highest levels of legal practice.

I bring to this application a strong academic record, of which I am proud and believe speaks to my capacity for sustained hard work and intellectual engagement. Over the four years of my LLB at the Ghana Institute of Management and Public Administration, I obtained 31 As and graduated with a GPA of 3.66/4.00. At the Ghana School of Law, I achieved 3 As in Part 1, and I intend to carry that level of commitment through the remainder of my professional training and into practice. I am, above all, eager to learn. I understand that pupillage is as much about being guided and corrected as it is about demonstrating what one already knows, and I welcome that process sincerely.

The early stages of a legal career offer their own distinct advantages, chief among them an unguarded curiosity, a readiness to adapt, and a professional identity that is still pliable enough to be shaped with intention. I arrive without entrenched habits or settled assumptions, and I regard this not as inexperience but as an openness that the right environment can turn into something lasting. I am ready to learn, to be corrected, and to grow, and I am committed to becoming a lawyer this firm would be proud to have trained.

I would be honoured to contribute to the work of Fitch Attorneys and to grow under the mentorship of its partners and associates. I have enclosed my CV for your consideration and would welcome the opportunity to discuss my application further at your convenience.

Yours sincerely,

Tracy Naa Lamiley Lawson
